The Post Office Unveils the E-STAMP.
May, 1999
WORD COUNT: 3301 LINE COUNT: 00255

TEXT:

...the Federal Computer Week Web site (<http://www.fcw.com>): "USPS unveils first approved Internet postage product" (March 31, 1998). It was referred to as "E-Stamp Internet Postage," a software product which would allow users to print postage from their PCs. In essence, you would simply log on to a secure server, order and pay for postage, download the postage, and print it directly onto an envelope. The new electronic postage service would work for sending first-class, priority, or express mail, as well as parcel...

... find this exciting! It represents a practical reason for everyone to log on and download postage stamps via computer. The new Internet postage would allow you the convenience of printing postage from your PC 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It would be easy...

...Since the software applies current postal rates, you save money when it prints the exact postage and frees you from having to "add the extra stamp just to make certain." All...

...I want to be the first one in line/online to get my PC-based postage.
On January 10, 1999, when the United States Postal Service raised the cost of a first-class postage stamp 1 cent, from 32 cents to 33 cents, many people were caught off guard...

...sign up as a beta tester (with the added incentive of $25 worth of free postage) failed because the E-Stamp software is not yet available in my ZIP code. (They...

...to contact when the beta program is expanded to our region or when E-Stamp postage becomes generally available.

In March 1998, a select group of users -- small businesses in the...
...from the United States Postal Service (USPS) to test the technology enabling the sale of postage over the Internet. The firm's executives come from Microsoft, Oracle, PointCast, and WebTV.

The Competition

...in Hayward, California, the address listed on its Web site.

Neopost calls its software "Simple Postage " and has similar system requirements as E-Stamp Corporation. An initial $49.99 membership fee...a free roll of labels, and a month's free access. Up to $500 in postage can be downloaded at one time.

Pitney Bowes (<http://www.pitneybowes.com>) introduced the electronic digital postage meter in 1996. Users connect through a modem and refill their postage meters with ease. This dial-up capability eliminated the inconvenience of a trip to the...

...and home offices usually don't have the volume of mail to warrant leasing a postage meter from Pitney Bowes for approximately $20 per month. The company is preparing to test...

This forward step by the USPS, one that supports eliminating the need to buy postage equipment and to make regular excursions to a post office, has been in the works...

...or less -- totals 7.2 million concerns. Small businesses buy approximately $7.1 billion in postage annually. This represents 13 percent of the $56 billion the post office sells in postage each year. Home office businesses make up about 20 million ("Neither Bugs, Nor Hackers, Nor Pitney B owes Will Keep E-Stamp from Delivering Your Postage ," fox marketwire.com, April 9, 1998).

Revenues from both market segments more than justify the...

...of mailing supplies from these alliance partners that enhance the value of its core online postage service." The products will be sold over E-Stamp's onlinestore.

The E-Stamp software...

...co-marketed in retail stores with Avery's labels and print supplies and Pelouze Online Postage Scales. (Look carefully at the face of your desktop postal scale. The one which shows...

...the Internet to make it easy and convenient for our customers to buy and use postage ," said Nicole Eagan, vice president of marketing for E-Stamp. "With the announcement of our...

...buy supplies that will allow them to reap even more benefits from using our online postage service. We understand that building a supplies business is a critical step in accelerating the adoption of online postage ."

As E-Stamp Corporation remains in the throes of finalizing its pricing, estimates for the...

...at approximately $200. Expect to pay a small service fee for the convenience of buying postage over the Internet -- not more than 10 percent of the amount of postage you purchase. E-stamp Internet postage will be less expensive to use than postage meters because postage meters require a monthly lease fee. Furthermore, I ask you: What is your time worth? For example, $50 worth of postage online, plus the fee, may cost you $55, but calculate your hourly rate and add...electronically and the amount is deducted from my checking and I can print out the postage all without leaving my desk. I can order as much or as little as I...

...undergoes its metamorphosis into the electronic age.

Be patient. This first major transformation of the postage stamp in more than 70 years, will continue on its slow, steady path: "Because an...
